IN MEMORIAM

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT

1882 - 1945

Because he has the rarest of abilities—he knows how to teach; because he has a sense of humor; because he understands and loves music, and has made us love it and understand it,

WE DEDICATE THIS BOOK TO

Professor George Sherman Dickinson

Avé

We, the class of nineteen hundred forty-five, are the first class to complete our education at Vassar in three years. These years have been a time of readjustment and change. Started as an emergency measure in wartime, the three year plan has proved the incentive for a reevaluation of the aims and ideals of a liberal arts education. No educational theory is perfect for all times, for a hard and fast system would imply intellectually regimented students. But we believe that with honest effort education will become more purposeful and will not be held back by the weight of inflexible ideas. We extend our greetings to all members of Vassar College, past, present, and future.

VASSAR COLLEGE
A·D·1861

In the beginning.....

First Year

We arrived one afternoon late in August, dutifully bringing our white dresses with us. The trees hid the hybrid architecture, and the campus looked very beautiful, very large, and very academic. We were impressed. We signed a hundred cards, and filled out a thousand blanks, and looked at a million happy, poised, glamorous faces. We felt small. There were no curtains in our windows. Why had we decided to be freshmen, anyway? We went to bed.

And then it all changed. We knew everybody, and we did everything. We tried out for the Misc and the Chronicle at the same time, with the vague idea of getting scoops for both papers, and piling glory on our heads, we found that our boarding school French still worked pretty well, and that it was beyond human power to memorize the bones of the frog. The mysteries of the note topic were revealed to us, and we amassed thick stacks of notes, and thumbed through our already grubby Form Manual.

It was wonderful. We could wear every day the lumberjack shirt we swiped from Brother when he went into the army. There was nobody to make us go to bed, and we soon split up into the ten-thirty and the two-thirty schools. We had a man at Yale, and a man in the army who got a ten day furlough in October, and another man in the navy. We had three big beer parties at the Dutch, and on Friday nights we stayed up until three having bull sessions with our roommate about Life. We were getting educated.

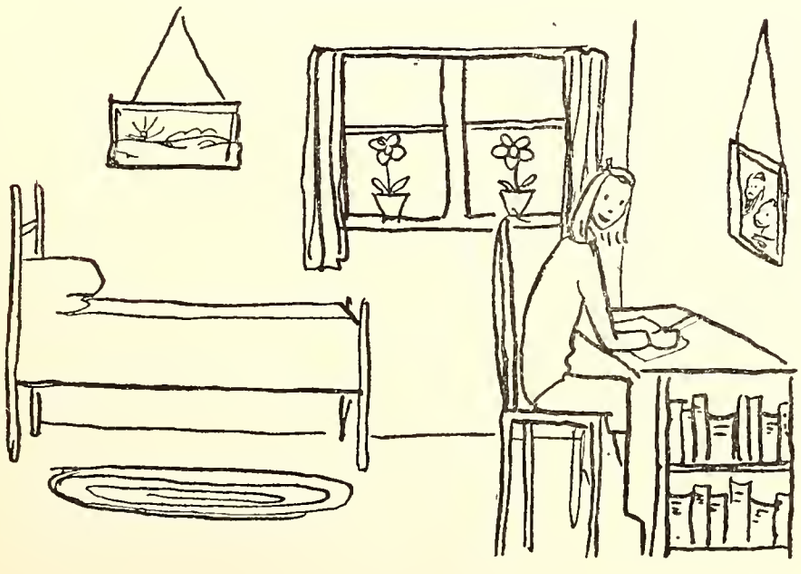
Students

Came first semester exams, and we crammed ten hours a day. Studying was a nightmare. When we got into the exams, we were amazed to find how easy they were; and we caught the 5:08 and went home for Christmas to tell our families and friends All About It. The day we came back we screamed and embraced our friends with wild joy, since we had been separated for two weeks. We were really home.

It was cold. The radiator went on, we discovered, at exactly 6:10 A.M. and we slouched deeper into the now filthy lumberjack shirt. We had two long papers at once, which was too many, and we trudged through the icy slush four times a week to Kenyon for fundamentals and squash. Then it rained one whole week, while we had our first attack of home-sickness, and we thought the whole Hudson was descending; and then it was spring.

We read the Waste Land and decided that we, too, were decadent. For the first time it seemed really worth while to explore the forbidden catwalks on Main, and we had sunbaths crouched behind a chimney. It was exam time in no time, but we could not manage to get as worried about it as we had before. And the C term was an Eldorado of Two Hundred Courses and afternoons in the solarium. On Salve night the genial juniors down the hall came in reeling like maenads and tossed us in the shower, but nobody cared. We would have our chance.

We were really sophomores now, after two terms. Important people. Next year we would really get down to work.



Second Year

Were we sophomores or juniors? Nobody was quite sure; we were convinced we were juniors, since we would graduate next year; the seniors were convinced we were sophomores, since we had been freshmen last year. It didn't really matter; we were sure we had found our niche. For we had all the advantages: nobody was worrying about us, and we had no particular responsibilities, like the jolly miller beside the river Dee. We were upperclassmen; we had reached the apex of life.

We looked over the new crop of freshmen critically. "They sure look green," some of us said. "They sure look sophisticated," others remarked. A nice crowd on the whole, but not as good as us. After all, we were upperclassmen. We noticed though, how many men they had. We went to the mail about one-fifth as much as we had, and we got about one-fifth as much mail. Never mind. There was still the man at Yale. We thought. He hadn't written in three weeks.

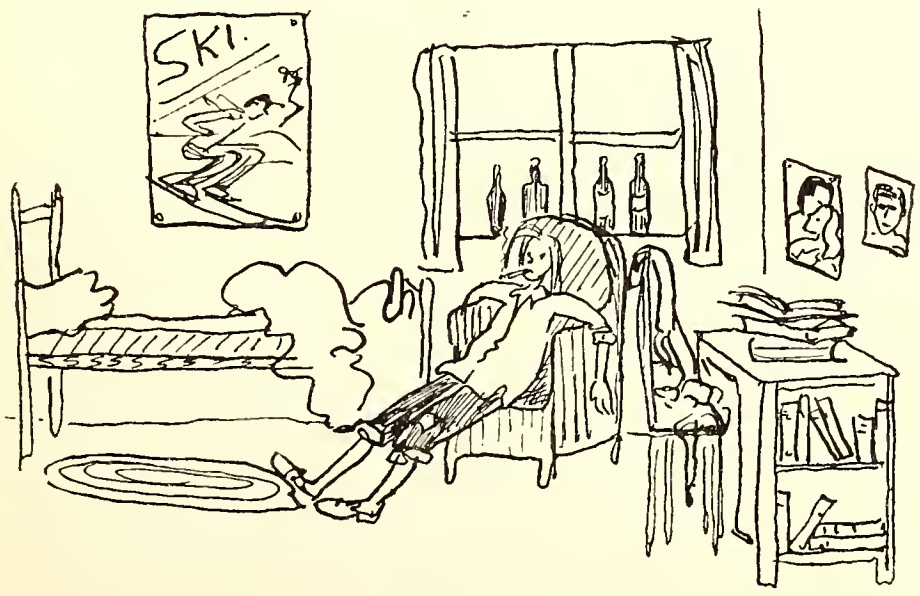
We kept our good resolutions faithfully until the middle of October, and then something happened. We stumbled upon the dangerous knowledge that it was possible to go to history unprepared, and that one was not necessarily flunked if a paper was turned in three days late. We read Mein Kampf steadily for three weeks completely ignoring all our work, and then came the crisis. Happy freshmen crises, with three whole days to do a note topic! We watched the dawn come in the window, and swore never again. We were wrong. It happened the next month.

Students

We were terribly busy. Five courses—hard ones, and we had stayed on the paper, and were wasting our youth in the cause of better journalism. We took trips to the Tabard as spring came along. Dramatics was an unexplored field; we made scenery and put on shorts and waved our lovely limbs in the kicking chorus in Soph Party. The man from Yale was in the audience, and he seemed impressed. We acquired a large and beautiful picture of him to put on the bureau, and our roommates admired him noisily. He was going overseas in a week. A pity.

Despite all the activity, we were doing better work than last year. We looked over our freshman papers and quietly shuddered, and then wrote our first really good term paper. We thought it was our life work and we stayed up all night typing it. Of course, we were practically flunking psych, but we can't be geniuses at everything. Besides, Miss Jones said we organized our material well. What do you want?

C term we let up a little—after all, we deserved a rest sometimes. It was really a wonderful tan. We perfected a foolproof scheme for cleaning a john in thirteen minutes flat, and we prowled up and down Arlington gazing at the new lavender and cerise suits. We became terribly witty and went to Founder's Day brandishing a twig, disguised as Birnam Wood. We were taking a couple of three hundred courses. They weren't much harder, and they were much more interesting. We thought perhaps our real bent was for scholarship.



Third Year

Grand old Seniors? We were not sure. It was like having a birthday—you expected to feel older, and you didn't. We had football games in the corridor with the pillows off the daybed, and the freshmen down the hall looked surprised at our levity. We were surprised that they were surprised, and it worried us. On our twenty-first birthday we went out and climbed trees to prove to ourselves that we were still young.

Of course, we had caps and gowns, and marching up to the chapel while the bells played a medieval student's song, we felt academic and part of a long line of tradition, until we became conscious of all the blue jeans around us. Most of the time we were too busy to worry about it. Why did we do extra-curricular work? Why couldn't we just sit and do the things we wanted to do? We finally decided that we were doing the things we wanted to do. We just wanted to do too many things.

The fall passed peacefully enough. We had to write a thesis sometime, but it wasn't due for months. We could not understand why the professor kept harping on it, and we did a little work in self-defense. We finished the term without undue strain —it seemed a little silly to worry about exams with comprehensives just around the corner, and we wondered what comprehensives were like. We asked our professors. One smiled kindly and said not to worry. The other chuckled a low, demonic laugh. We were not reassured, but we didn't think about them much.

Students

Christmas was very gay. We felt sentimental; we didn't know what we would be doing next year at this time, and we thought lovingly of hearth and home. Back at college we didn't even think. The thesis was raising its ugly head and snickering at us, and we got down to work.

We went to Prom in a fluffy creation of tulle and ostrich plumes, and, since it rained, rubber boots. We became obsessed with thoughts of Next Year and haunted the Vocational Bureau. We asked everyone we met if anyone needed a girl with not much training but a great deal of natural intelligence. Our extra-curricular activities were one by one given over to younger and abler hands, and we retired into our cells. But there were always distractions. We thought that perhaps we were not meant for scholarship after all.

It was the beginning of the end. We had a strange uneasy feeling when freshmen came into our beloved room and callously sized up its good and bad points. We watched the orchard in bloom for the last time and occasionally looked fondly at the hideous exterior of Avery. The library was still beautiful from the outside, but we saw a great deal more of the interior.

And when it was all over, and we were through with the exams and papers, labs, libe, waiting on breakfast, acting, singing, reading and all the rest; they gave us a little piece of paper saying that we had done all this. And we packed our bags and left; and that was the end of the beginning.

We drove through Taylor gate and were stopped by the Inquisition. "Any stiffness? Have you had IT?" No, we were healthy, but we were still quarantined, and our dreams of a glamorous and social fall faded. A couple of nights later we sang, "Oh polio, my polio, the dates may come, the dates may go"; while others of us, more intellectual, declared that, "You can't get to Vassar with a low I.Q., 'Cause Vera B. won't let you through". We settled down to a quiet autumn in our new college home, and every night we prayed for frost.

We went to the Tabard on the Outing Club picnic, and cooked, sang, and listened to Carrie Rassieur's tuneful guitar. We went to Prexy's teas attired in our black best, and we entertained at Freshman Stay at Home, once we had hung our curtains and laid the rug.

At Junior Prom we yielded the limelight for a little while and waited on the juniors and their dates in Main, but our glamorous posts, headed by Penny Charske, were in the public eye at the dance. In March we put on The Thirteenth Chair, and from backstage we watched Luisa Facciolo's eerie hocus-pocus and table lifting. And after the show we managed to put up with the Sophomores' impromptu Bongo-Conga around the dance floor. Salvé night we hid under the bed, until juniors with wild, blood-shot eyes dragged us out and dumped us in the trash barrel. We put on brilliant Shakespearean skits on Founder's Day; and we had our own class ceremonies on Tree Day, under Chairman Irma Gertz.

In the line of sports, Margie Okes won laurels by getting second place in the intercollegiate swimming meet. We experimented academically in the C term, when twenty selected freshmen took the new ten point course "Today's Cities".

We came back to Vassar last fall in a terrific state of excitement, and Soph Party reflected it. It was a smash success, running an extra show to pacify the crowds who were shut out on Saturday. Every night the house was filled to the windowsills, thanks to co-directors Nancy Bush and Mimi Griffin, cast, crews, and the authors of Tunnel of Love, Coney Island, and the other songs in Raisin' the Deuce. We sang them for the soldiers at Pawling, over Station WKIP, and at the '45-4 Senior Prom.

We went to Soph Prom, blind dates in tow; we wriggled through the snake dance, and admired the chilly bathing beauties on the walls of Students' that Prom Chairman Julie Richards and her committees had arranged. On Founder's Day, planned under the direction of Chairman Helen Christenberry, we dropped our work and went Shakespearean, costumed as Hamlet, Falstaff, or the three parts of Henry VI.

We contributed to the Janet McGean Scholarship fund, in memory of Janet McGean, who was killed in an airplane crash in the spring of 1944.

We worked hard, and were proud of the number of us who were on Dean's List, and of the wide interest in extracurricular activities. We had an unusual number of presidents of organizations in our class, including Punch McKittrick, the Head of Students Liberal Association, Mary Walker, Editor of the Brew, and Kay Winton, Editor of the Chronicle.

And to prove that we have diversified interests, we have more engaged girls than any other class. We wonder if there is any significance in the fact that we chose a new kind of class ring—plain gold.

We worked all summer, in factories, farms, or offices; some of us went to summer school. We came back to Vassar eagerly, for it was our last year, and "so much to do, so little time." We looked at the scanty supplies in the furniture exchange, and thanked our stars for our old and battered daybeds. During the weeks of quarantine we tried to convince our freshman advisees (and ourselves) that V. C. was the only place in the world for a good time.

We put on Junior Party. We admit that there wasn't much plot to Pyn-Up Boy, but we were proud of the acts, the songs, the excellent chourses, the lusty character of the Only Woman Tailor, and sad little Errol with his Hepsibah. Senior Prom was romantic with a Valentine's Day theme, despite the high percentage of blind dates. Never mind, some day he'll come along.

We wore our new caps and gowns the first week of B term, and found that an extra layer of cloth over ski pants and overcoat helped to keep out a little of the cold. We told freshmen that we'd been here three long years, and we'd never seen anything like it—no doubt the sun was growing cold, and spring would never come again.

Spring did come, hot and early, ushering in a whole new crop of diamonds and wedding rings. The rest of us remembered the old legend that on graduation night, a senior must take her man for a walk around Sunset Lake, and if he doesn't propose by the third time around, push him in.

We wrote our theses, finished our experiments, spent spring vacation with our roommate in New York, took comprehensives; and then we graduated, the first class to go through Vassar in three years.

Drafting room

The art major lives in a world of beauty. She contemplates the geometric simplicity, linear pattern, and the wonders of chiaroscuro in her stack of prints. A peaceful life—until the next slide quiz. In the applied art studios she makes her own masterpieces for future generations of 105ers to puzzle over.

Drama

D. P. looks glamorous from in front of the footlights, but the drama majors do more hard work than almost anybody in college. Blood, sweat and greasepaint are a recipe for Shakespeare. And we can't forget the scenery, lights, costume and property crews that work in oblivion and make the show.

English

We went from Beowulf to Thomas Hardy, we relived our childhoods and our first experiences with reality in Narrative Writing, and we can read Chaucer with a Southern accent. The ec, soc and anthropology majors have learned about the private lives of the Ugandi natives, the sources of the Melting Pot, and why we have inflation. But they are faced with the difficult question: whether to make the facts fit the theory or the theory fit the facts.

But we keep on trying. We struggle with the subjunctive, mangle the sentence structure, and invent our own vocabulary in our efforts to master the mysteries of the Russian Mind or Sturm und Drang. "The red plague rid you for learning me your language", Caliban said. We suppose, in our soberer moments, that English is hard, too.

Hygiene

Hygiene is one of the few things we all have in common. We found out what section we were in, and we went regularly. Some of us took notes, some wrote letters, some knitted, and a few slept. But all of us, at any rate, took hygiene.

Physical Education

There's nobody, we're willing to bet, who will ever forget the day she discovered that her angel robe didn't fit. From there it was just a step to leotards and the first lame weeks of fundamentals. And by the time we had passed intermediate tennis and got used to the simple regulation bathing suits, exercise was quite worth the effort.

Geology

The geology major stalks through the Catskills with pick and hammer pursuing some wily pebble along the track of a glacier that dried up a long time ago. She has already made elaborate plans for an oil well in her back yard. And in these lean days, she's glad she learned to roll her own on the field trip in Wyoming.

Geography

Gone are the days of the flat green "joggerfy" when we looked at maps in awe and wonderment. Now we are at home from the Gobi west to Guadalcanal, we can tell a typhoon from a monsoon, and locate a veldt, a prairie, and a pampa. Where would you go if you wanted to plant a sugar beet? The world's our oyster; ask us.

Music

Into 140 we go, untwisting all the chains that tie the hidden soul of harmony. Sonata? Plain chant? Dickey will teach us—he's there now, conducting the class, and his Bach is worse than his bite. The sonata is divided into movements, the first, the second, the third, the fourth. Polyphony, the three B's. It could be the recapitulation or the exposition, maybe, or even a coda. If you don't know, courage: come out and face the music.

History

The history major walks in a narrow rut between Swift and Stack three, lost in a frame of reference, while she mutters dates under her breath. She explains wearily that Papal Bulls do not live in pastures, and that the Diet of Worms stopped being funny in 105.

Psychology

The psych major sometimes feels that she is spending all her time pulling habits out of rats. Freud will give the best of us a worried introspective air, and our roommates sometimes feel that we are watching them overtly, hoping a neurosis will come to light. But we know that we are the only really normal people on campus.

Religion

The study of religion not only gives us a deeper insight into our own and other's beliefs, but also helps us better to understand historical and cultural movements. In addition to our own religious traditions, we learn about the strange sounding yet not altogether foreign religions of India and the Far East.

Political Science

"We love to study, we love our polit" they sang in Soph Party a few years ago. From the case histories of Jones vs The State of New York, we have learned how governments are put together, and we blessed our superior wisdom when we found that we could out-argue our roommates during the elections last November.

Plant Science

Life is not all a bed of roses, we have learned, and the littlest toadstools have the longest names. We spend long hours in the lab bending over microscopes, and drawing pictures of the strange things we discover. But what could be lovelier than a field trip in the spring, picking flowers?

We have spent a great deal of time knee deep in Wappinger's Creek looking for small slimy things. And we have learned about ourselves from Cleo, the lady that comes apart. It's a long way up through the phyla, but we're rather proud of evolution.

The Library

The everyday libe, the libe of overnight books and long sunny afternoons in stack three, can look like a Gothic cathedral on a snowy December evening when the choir is singing Adeste Fideles in the tower. If you prefer spring, take a book to one of the courtyards, and watch the stone gargoyles for a couple of hours. Or, if you wish, study.

When we were very young and verdant we arrived at Vassar, and the first thing we heard was, "Do you feel all right?" There was an epidemic it seemed, but we were too busy to worry about it. All the world's a stage, and Vassar's there, acting. The DP majors and the common man in the Hall Plays sacrifice their youth to the world of make-believe, the very real world of painting scenery, pulling ropes, lost props, and a Simon Legree director with a long black whip. We never could figure out how they juggle their hours of sleeping, studying, and toiling off or on stage. And a word of commiseration for the long suffering roommates who have to watch them muttering their lines and making faces in the mirror.

Worth it? Cast, crews, and audience come back to Avery howling for more. We have seen some of the great moments of the theater: Mr. Caliban Post (is he a man or a fish?), and mr. e.e. cummings' sleep pushing a wheelbarrow of green mice. And we marvelled at the ease with which our friends in Third Hall became beetles, butterflies, and worms.

It's the one extra-curricular activity in which all of us participate. The mornings when we sleep through the alarm clock, we wake up with orange juice and coffee in the Retreat. We order superstructures in the Pub and the Drug —chocolate ice cream, fudge sauce, marshmallow, butterscotch, dust, nuts, and a cherry, please. Students' Association is composed of all of us; it is the student body as a democratic unit, working out our own problems. We try to keep on the straight and narrow, away from such crimes as laying a frayed extension cord under the rug, or running down our head resident, while riding without a light. We argue out current problems: walking on the grass, smoking areas, details of co-op living. This year we cooperated with the government by keeping off crowded express trains. Students' is not just an organization for enforcing laws; through it we have evolved a plan for living.

When the air in our rooms becomes too thick and smoky, there comes the Call of the Wild. The pioneering type is off to the Tabard for the privilege of chopping wood and burning bacon. We play squash in the square boxes in Kenyon, and mutilate badminton birds in our zeal. Hockey balls rebound from our sticks and shins. Most of us cool off in the Kenyon pool. A few of us, confident even in the simple regulation bathing suit (fits all figures) take our men there. When we feel nostalgia for our childhood we play hopscotch in the Quad. Sometimes we sit on the steps, yo-yo in hand. And the most popular sport of all: Sunbathing 388, MTWTHFSS, 1:40-4:30

Community Church

The aim of the Community Church is to unite girls of all faiths in worship, and increase the value of devotions and of practical religious work. Under the leadership of Audrey Talmadge '45, the Church conducts daily non-sectarian services, helps supervise Lincoln Center, Catherine Street, the Jewish Center, and the Fair Club; and coordinates the religious activities of the college.

Executive Church Council

Christian Science

For those who wish to know more about the principles of Christian Science.

Inter-faith Group

To bring together girls of different faiths, and to eliminate religious prejudice.

Interracial Group

The Interracial Group provides an opportunity for combatting prejudice and proving that there is really "neither East nor West nor border nor breed nor birth."

Newman Club

The Newman Club gives Catholic girls in the college an opportunity to meet together and further their knowledge and understanding of their beliefs.

Fair Club

One of the community centers for children, gives you a chance to help the children develop their talents, and to use your own talent for tact.

Goodfellowship Club

Where the employees go for relaxation and recreation, also provides an opportunity for the employees and students to meet together.

Choir Club

That confusion at seven o'clock on Tuesday and Thursday evenings is the Choir dashing off to rehearsal. The beautiful music on Sunday morning seems to prove that they spent their time well.

Philalatheis

Can you act? Construct a Victorian parlor out of canvas and scrap wood? Pound a nail straight? In the Hall Plays we exploit our genius along these lines. In the fall the upperclassmen put on Love's Old Sweet Song with the proper Saroyan touch; and in March the freshmen presented that super-chiller The Thirteenth Chair. (If there are any "incidents" in the audience, blood transfusions may be obtained at the nearest exit.)

Political Association

Polit is for everyone who wants to remodel the world, by revolution, counter-revolution, or even legislation. Discuss the issue, look up the statistics, take into account economic-political-sociological factors, and wire your congressman.

Vassar Brew

The Brew prints the best literary work done on campus, and Art flourishes even with extra courses and semesters to be coped with. Five times a year the battle is waged between the palely esoteric and the vulgarly popular.

Miscellany News

Three A. M. struggles with headlines, frantic discussions on "What is our policy on policies?" and hasty trips to the Drug for coffee make up a newspaper. The Misc is going to press—watch for that Wednesday afternoon scoop.

1945 Vassarion

The Vassarion is like poison ivy. It comes out in the spring and everybody gets it. We, of course, sweating out our souls on ads, art, and amiable blurbs under the pictures, are convinced that it's the Best Yet; but never trust an editor.

Chronicle

The Chronicle, now in its second year, is a vigorous purveyor of fearless reporting. We remember the famous rival posters that came out announcing that "We cover everything" and "We expose everything." There's good news in our mail boxes on Saturday morning.

Art Club

Formed for the artists who either don't have time enough for regular art courses, or who don't have time enough in the courses to do all they want, the Art Club provides an opportunity for informal sketching. We struggle with the human form, trying to boil down three dimensions into two; and who knows, we'll be Rembrandts yet.

P. Baldwin, Art Club Pres.

Le Cercle Francais

Allons, mes amies, chansons! Au claire de la lune, a sweet refrain, or the martial sound of La Marseillaise. Le jour de gloire est arrivé! Today we have a meeting of Le Cercle Francais. Villon, Ronsard, Chateaubriand, les cathédrales de Nôtre Dame où Orleans—they're discussed in lectures; and all knowledge is pleasant when l'ésprit is there.

French Club Officers

Classical Society Officers

Classical Society

The glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome have not sunk out of sight in the dust. Law and literature, potsherds and Pindar, strophe and antistrophe, the Via Appia, bread and circuses, the Parthenon—and there's the last civilization, curled around the Mediterranean. We learn it all in the Classical Society, which has the self-announced reputation of having the best refreshments on campus.

Thekla Club Officers

Composers and Thekla

The relationship of the Composers Club and the Thekla Club is symbiotic—the one composes the music and the other plays it. "Music hath charms to soothe the savage mind"; so come with your music and your violin, trombone, or pipes of Pan.

Der Deutsche Verein Officers

Der Deutsche Verein

To the Deutsche Verein Friday meeting come, to Apfelwein and doughnuts eat, and a Singkreis have. Ja, Du, du liegst mir im Herzen, sing, Fraulein, sing, laut und deutlich, Ich weiss nicht was soll es bedeuten . . . And a Weihnachtsspiel, a Christmas play with drei kings, a Christkind, Mary, Death, and a Devil, and a strong 105 accent. We must always Deutsch speak: Hast du eine Zigarette? Zwei Seelen wohnen, ach, in meiner Brust. And one soul us irregular verbs teaches, and the other to drink another glass of Apfelwein, bitte.

Russian Club

Life, alas, and the Russian Soul, inextricably mixed. Should we then, sadly, be in a cherry orchard, or march to the Kremlin waving red banners? Must we sit on the steppes, with three different unpronouncable names? We learn about Russian life, and then off to a borsch supper. Vodka, Comrade, or tea for two in a samovar?

Russian Club Officers

Il Circolo Italiano officers

Il Circolo Italiano

Il Circolo Italiano—picnic at the Piccirillis, sing, dance the tarentella, and learn about vita e lingua in Italia. And at Christmas time there's a spettacolo di Natale, with Maria e Giuseppe, put on for the bambini.

Tertulia Hispana

Tertulia Hispaña—sing and dance, señorita, and learn about España and la América Española. Me gusta mucho; and a good time makes a Good Neighbor Policy.

Tertulia Hispana officers

International club officers

International Club

Are you Chinese, Polish, Japanese, French, or just plain American (whatever that is)? At the International Club you can meet girls from other countries; and you settle international problems while you figure out the relationship of crumpets, brioche, Zweibach, and doughnuts. The year's activities are climaxed by the International Day Festival, with folk songs, dances, and colorful traditional costumes.

Science club officers

Science Club

Xylophil, gamma rays, and lucite affect us, whether we know it or not. The Science Club keeps us informed on new discoveries in the many branches of scientific research. It has an active program, featuring bulletin board exhibits and lectures by faculty members.

Rehabilitation Center

When the Pawling Rehabilitation Center was started, Vassar decided that it ought to do its part, too. Dressed in our finest, we took the perilous ride to Pawling for dances and to help put on shows. Our patriotism seems to be appreciated. We like it ourselves.

Radio Workshop

The Radio Workshop puts on its regular program, Vassar on the Air, Station WKIP. Those who get mike fright, write scrips and direct shows and get a preview of the Industry of the Future.

Co-op System

Coop living involves both mind and muscle. Some of our more ingenious friends spend weeks perfecting systems for simultaneously pushing three brooms down the hall, thus saving four minutes a day. On message center, one orchid, three specials, two laundry cases to deliver. Sign on the dotted line, and trudge off to the fourth floor. On K. P. we figured out that we dried four thousand glasses and six thousand forks last winter. Eventually we learned how to bring in coffee without slopping it into the saucers, and how to remember the names of ten different cereals. Gotta go put on a cotton dress. May I borrow your hairnet?

Self-help

Well what can you do when the balmy days of March find you buying an Easter suit with May's allowance. We earned money for our extravagances by straightening out the confusion in Stack III, typing these, for the glassy eyed seniors down the hall, or taking care of children when the funny, funny faculty were at Poughkeepsie's movies. And, hardest of all, we fed the howling hungry mobs in the Hoot'n' Owl on Saturday night.

Salué

Salvé One Nine Four Five,
O Seniors, hail all hail our class.
We're out for play today,
Sweeping onward in a mass,
And we will shout Vi Vo Vi Vo Vim!
And keep our rocket's flame alive,
For when the Seniors are out
It is time then to shout
For One Nine Four Five!

Class Song

In praise of Vassar here we sing
Of days we will recall,
For once again our voices ring
Throughout your hallowed halls.
So let us keep our memory true
And for your honor strive,
So you in turn will not forget
The Class of Forty Five.

Daisy Chain, a chorus of female pulchritude. It seems unnecessary for these lovely creatures to have the chance to ask so many daisies if "he loves me, loves me not . . . "

GULF
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

This Emblem on any product stands for two guarantees of excellence: one, visible; one, invisible.

The Visible guarantee is evidenced by the plant and properties that make Gulf one of the country's largest producers and refiners of crude oil.

The Invisible guarantee is determination of Gulf to make the best petroleum products that skill, science, loyal employees and alert management can jointly achieve.

MISERY LOVES COMPANY

. . . particularly the company of a Connecticut General Students' Reimbursement Check that will help pay doctors', nurses' and hospital fees when accident or sickness comes along to disturb your budget. It's no fun, at best, to be sick or injured, but it's adding insult to injury to pile up a lot of bills . . . unless you have arranged to have Connecticut General pay them.

Most Vassar undergraduates have this valuable protection. Graduates can continue coverage with individual policies obtained through Connecticut General representatives in their communities.

It is well worthwhile to be one of the "protected ones."
